About the Conference

The Second National Conference on Mathematical Analysis and Algebra (NCMAA 2026) aims to bring together researchers, academics, and postgraduate students from different institutions to exchange ideas and discuss recent developments, current challenges, and emerging directions in mathematical analysis and algebra.

The conference offers a scientific forum for presenting original research, sharing new perspectives, and strengthening academic collaboration. It highlights theoretical and applied aspects of mathematics, with particular attention to algebraic structures, functional analysis, fuzzy mathematics, and their connections with other scientific fields, including physics, engineering, and artificial intelligence.

The scientific program is intended to include invited lectures, research presentations, and thematic discussions that encourage constructive dialogue and the development of future collaborations.

Conference Objectives

The conference seeks to:

- Present recent advances and original contributions in mathematical analysis and algebra.
- Provide opportunities for researchers and postgraduate students to exchange scientific ideas.
- Encourage cooperation between research teams and academic institutions.
- Highlight interactions between pure mathematics and its applications in other disciplines.
- Promote the dissemination of mathematical research and support emerging researchers.

Topics of Interest

Contributions are welcome in, but are not limited to, the following areas:

- Applied Functional Analysis

- Fuzzy Mathematics
- Algebra and Algebraic Structures
- Mathematical Analysis and Its Applications
- Mathematics and Interdisciplinary Applications

Note: The topics listed above are indicative and do not exclude relevant contributions from other areas of mathematical analysis and algebra.
